Sabrina O’Connell asked what the City is doing to deal with the influx of businesses operating without City business licenses in the City limits. She asked what steps the City has in place to ensure that business are operating with current valid business licenses. If a citizen has a complaint or questions a business and its licensure, can they expect the City follow through? She also asked what the rules are regarding businesses and residences combined. Public Works Director Lee Webster noted that there are some businesses on Main Street with residences in the back and these are grandfathered in, but any new requests for this will have to go through the proper channels for approval with the Building Department and the City Planner. City Attorney Chuck Zimmerman said that the City is actively addressing issues regarding licensure as well as verifying the buildings are safe and zoned for the specific business or businesses. Public Works Director Lee Webster stated that if there is a question or a concern regarding any of these things, someone has to be willing to make a formal complaint. Webster stated that he can’t see everything that is going within the City, but it is extremely helpful when the public is willing to bring concerns to his attention. He cannot address them if he doesn’t know about them.
